

ANNUAL BAZAAR OF ST ANDREW'S -PRES.-
ATTRACTS CROWDS

Saturday afternoon last the C.N. clubrooms was the rendezvous for practically everybody in town between the hours of two and six. It was the occasion of the annual bazaar of the L.A.

In addition to stalls for fancy work, candy, home cooking, garden and field produce etc., there was the ever-attractive fishpond for the kiddies, as well as an extra attraction under the name of "hoop-la".

During the whole afternoon light refreshments were obtainable, and a large number took advantage of the opportunity to partake of this acceptable service to keep out the wintry blasts which were blowing outside.

Those responsible for the several stalls etc., were as follows:—
Fancy work—Mrs N. Kenny, Mrs H. Walker.
Candy and Home Cooking—Mrs

Stuart, Mrs Brunker and Miss Rank's Produce stall—Mr and Mrs Carsell Fishpond—Mrs Mathers, Hood—Miss L. Lilly. In the tea room, Mrs Dunsmore and a host of willing workers made light of their arduous duties while Mrs Hartling cheered the many along life's rough pathway by casting their fortunes in pleasant places after the palm of her hand had been crossed with the customary piece of silver.

We understand that the affair was a complete success, too, from a financial standpoint.

ALBERTA CROP HEAVIEST PER BUSHEL

Alberta's 1927 crops of wheat, oats, barley and rye lead those of the other western provinces as regards average weight per bushel, according to the report of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics issued on October 10. On the basis of 100 representing the average for the past ten years Alberta

	Alta	Sask.	Man.
Wheat	105	93	87
Oats	104	89	71
Barley	103	98	95

In the year 1923 Alberta was also in the lead on the ten-year basis with wheat 105, oats 106, barley 103 and rye 102.

A NOVEL BANQUET

Under the chairmanship of the High Commissioner for Canada, Hon Peter Larkin, a dinner was held on Tuesday last at the Midland Hotel, Manchester.

England. All the courses consisted of Canadian food products, such as salmon chicken, bacon, fruits and maple syrup. The guests 25 in all, were representatives of importers, wholesalers and re-

The novel part of the event was the distribution to the guests, at the close of the evening, of samples of butter, cheese, bacon, ham, honey, maple syrup, maple sugar, canned fish fruit, vegetables and other food products, all produced in Canada.

STUPENDOUS TASK!

For their production of "Across the Pacific," starring Monte Blue Warner Bros. reproduced a large section of the city of Manila and two miles of tropical shore line.

With this achievement the actual landscaping and altering of the surface of the earth itself predicated some years ago has come to pass.

That being twenty-three years ago, Manila and other historical places, concerned in the picture have been so modernized that they were not suitable for use in the picture. Consequently these places were constructed in California at enormous expense from photographs and drawings made at the time and carefully collected by the Warner research department over a period of some months.

The two miles of shore line, the largest set ever constructed in the history of moving pictures had to be planted along its entire length with banana plants and other tropical plants. On this is seen the tents of a regiment and 500 veterans of the Spanish-American and Great Wars as American troops.

"Across the Pacific comes to the theatre next Monday and Tuesday.

CHAPTER I

Years Ago

The report of Storer's cowardly report echoed in Senora Vasquez's heart insistently. She knew that it and found its mark in her son. Don Captain Storer—her son—had leapt, heard it, too, and without hesitation rushed around the hacienda eager to take his brother's place.

Back in the stable yard the peon laborers and vaqueros were huddled together in fear and trembling the deaf forehead and twisted jaw of Captain Storer—her son—upon his big loose lips—blew through the smoking barrel of his revolver with gloating satisfaction.

Summoning the last bit of strength Vasquez lunged toward Storer with drawn sword. His mouth, distorted with pain opened pitifully to cry out,
"A Vasquez avenges a Vasquez!" but the strain was too great and he fell trottering to the tiled floor.

At this moment the young Don Hernandez gained the stable yard. His intense fury must have shown in his face because the sailors suddenly spurred their stolen horses and galloped through the arch and away, leaving Storer to face the consequences of his own brutality.

Storer realized he had gone too far to retreat. One look into the young white face staring at him across the balcony and Don Hernandez the new master of the house was wont to watch from
the balcony with folded arms and a frown upon his face, but his heart was boyish restlessness that was difficult to suppress. Senora Vasquez was always slightly contemptuous of the rabble and hated the rush because its lawful influence had been responsible for her son's death.

A regular procession almost constantly passed by the Vasquez estate
and Don Hernandez the new master
of the house was wont to watch from
the balcony with folded arms and a frown upon his face, but his heart was
boyish restlessness that was difficult
to suppress. Senora Vasquez was always slightly contemptuous of the rabble and hated the rush because its
lawful influence had been responsible
for her son's death.

For a brief moment a spark of recognition came back into the young man's eyes and a smile of understanding and love passed between the two brothers. That last good-bye gave the young renewed strength. His hand tightened around the sword. Holding it up he read from the inscription, "A Vasquez avenges a Vasquez."

He belonged to the breed of men who cannot glory in cowardly revenge.
Solemnly heing his bound adversary he cut the larist with his sword's tip.

Surprised at being released but not man enough to accept it honorably, Storer rolled over on his stomach and under cover of turning slightly pulled his pistol. Leaping to his feet he whirled around and fired without warning.

Blood appeared on Don Hernandez's forehead and trickled slowly down his cheek. With all the ferocity of a wild animal disturbed in his lair he thrust out and drove his sword into Captain Storer's cowardly body with fatal accuracy.

The Captain staggered as if tossed in a storm washed clean. His pistol fell from lifeless fingers and he sank to the ground.

Vasquez watched the death throes coldly, dispassionately; then wiping off his blade crossed to his brother's inert form and knelt, bowed in grief with one hand, pressed affectionately against his lifeless shoulder.

"Gone!" he sobbed and swallowed tears of grief.

The peons and vaqueros who had been standing by in awed silence crossed themselves. Their master's soul had passed on to join his ancestors.

One poked away to the chapel and began fumbling with the bell ropes.

The little chapel bells rang mournfully and echoed on the way to the Vasquez estate turned back, or came on to offer sympathy.

All through the night the chapel bells tolled their sad news.

Adventurous ruffians from all parts of the world began congregating in California to dig for their pot of gold and San Francisco the peaceful little house of the Spaniards became a seething caldron of criminal activity.

Houses were looted, stores were devoted and Storer was not the only captain to leave his ship.

Men gambled and consumed liquor in the rough care-free spirit of mining camp life. In short the Spanish village had become the mecca of a gold mad world. The harbor was crowded with ships of all descriptions and many nationalities and on the shores a myriad of tents appeared to shelter the shifting population. Frame shacks were erected overnight and when not used as homes served as supply bases for tools and provisions.

A regular procession almost
constantly passed by the Vasquez estate
and Don Hernandez the new master
of the house was wont to watch from
the balcony with folded arms and a frown upon his face, but his heart was
boyish restlessness that was difficult
to suppress. Senora Vasquez was always slightly contemptuous of the rabble and hated the rush because its
lawful influence had been responsible
for her son's death.

For instance they saw a hardfaced
"Madam" drive past with a bevy of painted girls. Reckless followers of the gold diggers sitting on chairs inter and under the weight of heavy purses and dragging young children by the hands in their efforts to make speed.

Vasquez and his mother were literally sitting on their doorstep watching the world go by. A world, people by creatures so remote in ambition and desires from their own high minded and chivalrous instincts that there was no mutual ground of understanding.

For instance they saw a hardfaced
"Madam" drive past with a bevy of
painted girls. Reckless followers of the gold diggers sitting on chairs inter and under the weight of heavy
purses and dragging young children by
the hands in their efforts to make
speed.

The game was held up to return the salute, and while an especially smitten male lingered longer than necessary over the salutation his opponent stealthily reached across, grabbed a couple of gold francs from the pot and drained the joint bottle of whiskey. The amorous one turned back in time to realize that he had been cheated. Out came his knife in an instant and he leaped up with a volley of curses. They clinched, and staggered about the moving wagon until it hit a rut and threw them sprawling into the roadside. Still clinging they rolled around until contact with a deep mud puddle brought them to their senses. Yelling at the driver they ran after the departing wagon and the boisterous laughter and jeers of the painted girls.

All life was not the that during the Gold Rush, but unfortunately the Vas-quezes' secluded existence prevented their knowing about the big generous things that occurred. The romance of the California Gold Diggers was just as great in its way as the romance of Spain's own early explorations and settlement.

Fifty years had passed since that memorable day of '49, which was real beginning of San Francisco's prosperity. The city grew until it became the commercial capital of the west coast. The lawless days of the gold diggers had become only slightly more circumspect and at the beginning of the twentieth century it was a joyous pleasure loving city—the "Bohemia" of America. The Paris of the Pacific.

Gambling was rife and glittering dance halls flourished. The "Barbary Coast" and the famous "Cocktail Route" were the rendezvous of motes and the haunt of convivial characters. Blazing electric signs threw out their glow of welcome to all-rich and poor alike
—the sinner and the saint.

And just a few blocks away yet separated by centuries of creed and custom was Chinatown—the capital of California's fifty thousand Chinese population. All the lure of the East was there, with little that was good and much that was evil. Gambling rooms, opium dens, stores that were legitimately business, and houses whose business was illegitimate—all were centered in this section that outwardly was under civil jurisdiction but actually not at all governed by its laws and ordinances.

At the old Vasquez ranch high in the hills overlooking not only the encroaching city but the bay beyond and even the Farrallon Islands in the dim distance, the latest male descendant of the illustrious line held desperately to the ancestral acres.

Don Hernandez Vasquez now in his seventies had become a white-haired dignified old aristocrat. He was still eloquent in manner with all the pride of the old Spanish nobility, and to his sorrow had seen the ranches and traditions of his old neighbors go one by one, into the insatiable man of the city.

As he stood on the hillside, leaning in a gold-topped cane, gazing before he shook his head sadly. The end was inevitable. The rancho was pitiful by comparison to its previous splendor.
The land was still there, to be sure.
But what had Overrun with scrubby growth, uncultivated, wild, it was a tragic and silent monument of the past.

His wandering glance finally took in the famous old ranch house. That too was but a symbol of the decay that had been going on for more years than he had liked to remember. The walls were cracked and half covered with moss. Here and there huge gaps showed in the masonry, and over it all the vines had run riot; around it the shrubbery had grown wild.

He walked slowly toward the house with a shrug of his aristocratic shoulders. What was to be must be! He was living in the present, but not of it. As he neared the patio his expression suddenly changed into one of enthusiasm and anticipation. Here at least was something that pleased him mightily.
(The clinking of castles beautifully timed to the soft thrumming of a quitar, reached his ear. His eyes sparkled brilliantly and he leaned against the doorway watching the delightful scene that brought back a breath of the picturesque past.

Dolores Vasquez, the granddaughter of the rancho was dancing. Her long full skirts cleared the flags of the patio and revealed daintily shod feet as she whirled. Her lovely head held proud and high nodded to the music's rhythm. Her beautiful eyes flashed merrily and her lips parted to smile at the faithful old peon who accompanied her on the guitar.

Leaning lazily on a rustic bench gazing at Dolores as she puffed carelessly on a cigarette, sat Don Luis Costanso was a twentieth century cassano dressed in the height of fashion but nevertheless adhering as closely as possible to his ancestral influences.
He sported a small, trimly waxed nose stache which seemed a fitting climax to his high forehead, elaborate, all-scarf and broad brimmed hat. Altogether he was exceedingly good to look at—according to Don Luis.

"Why do you not smile at me Dolores?" he objected as she continued to fling her entrancing smiles over her shoulder to the old peon who beamed on her with adoration as he strummed a gay Spanish air.

Dolores did not answer at once but continued dancing toward her grandfather who she had just noticed in the doorway.

As old Hernandez watched the charming picture his heart swelled with pride. Here was a Vasquez who was the fairest of them all. And as for Don Luis—well, he was not the son of an old friend and a fitting mate for his beloved Dolores? But then she had a way with her and even his experienced eyes could not determine anything but friendship for Don Luis in the actions of his granddaughter; he wanted to see love.

It was not always so. In his younger days the senoritas did not behave so calmly in the presence of a suitor.

And once again his thoughts carried him back into the past. Back to the time when the very name patio echoed to the shouts and laughter of a dozen senoritas and as many dashing young Spaniards—some of them dancing on his own Dolores—others on the balcony singing and applauding.

Ah! but it was hard to grow old—in poverty.

As Dolores finished the dance she blew a kiss from her dainty fingertips and made a deep courtesy before him.
Then as he continued to smile sadly sadly she laid her hand consolingly on his arm and said, "Don't worry dear—some day we shall live again in the glory that has gone."

Vasquez shook his head sadly. "No, my dear, the past is gone and the glory and fame of the Vasquez have gone with it."

She looked at him pityingly for a moment, then her face brightened with a happy smile. Laughing gaily more piqued before him saying, "See!
I shall always dance and make you think of the great festa you love to speak of—when you first met my grandmother." Wrapping her mantilla about her, she began an old fashioned Spanish dance.

Alone in the great open patio by the fountain she danced for her stran-gly assorted audience of three men. Her grandfather, a young Spanish suitor and an aged servant. Yet no dance of the stage could have been more allure and unconscious charm than Dolores'.
Nor could any actress have made a more gripping or definite impression upon her audience. It vividly recalled the grandfather's youth, it aroused Don Luis' smoldering passions and it made the old peon very proud to serve so lovely a mistress.

The continuation of this thrilling aerial will appear next week. Don't miss it, issue.

MUNICIPAL HOSPITALS

In a recent issue of the Montreal Daily Herald and Weekly Star there appeared an editorial dealing with the country hospital problem.

"The time has arrived," said the Montreal paper, "for provincial legislatures to give serious attention to the crying needs of country hospitals. Already the governments of some, if not all of the provinces, makes grants of money to city hospitals, partly because they now minister to the needs of the whole of the provincial population."

But even in these days of rapid railway and automobile transport, the suffering and danger to life involved in prolonged journeying to the city hospitals is often extremely dangerous.

The lack of a hospital is in many districts a great inconvenience and the cause of much suffering, and perhaps loss of life.

In this respect the Wainwright district is in a very favorable situation. We will soon have a modern well equipped hospital that must prove a great boon to the people of this district. Before the hospital was established, a serious matter at any time, was doubly so. The patient in some cases was too ill to make the journey to a city hospital, and if the patient was taken to the city it was a heavy expense.

Soon the patient will go to the Wainwright hospital where the best nursing care and medical attention will be available and under the municipal plan the cost will be comparatively low.

LEARN TO FORGET

If you would increase your happiness and prolong your life, forget your neighbor's faults. Forget the temptations. Forget the fault-finding and give little thought to the cause which provoked it. Forget the peculiarities of your friends, and only remember the good points which make you fond of them. Forget all personal quarrels which you may have had by accident, and which if fully regarded would seem a thousand times worse than they are. Blot out, as far as possible all disagreements of life; they will come, but they will grow larger if you remember them, and the constant thought of acts of meanness or worse still, malice will only tend to make you more familiar with them from yesterday; start out with a clear slate for today, and write upon it for sweet memory's sake only those lovable things which are lovely and lovable.

STOP THIEF!

LOCK YOUR CAR!

BY ERWIN GREER

(President Greer School of Electrical Automotive Trades, Chicago, Ill.)

You may sit next to an automobile thief in the subway, trolley, or ferryboat. I have often questioned these men as to why they persisted in following such a calling; their answers were practically all the same: "It's such easy money." The average owner of an automobile does not employ a chauffeur; the car, therefore, must be left unguarded most of the time. This is the thief's great opportunity—the unguarded, unlocked car. A man drives up to a cigar store, runs in for a pack of cigarettes; he leaves his car running for the moment, and even though he may have been in the store but a few seconds, upon emerging he finds his car gone.

I am now paying fifty dollars for the same theft insurance that but a few years ago cost me ten dollars.

How, then, is the average human being to protect his car from the store thief? He must lock it. Regardless of the ignition lock which is one the car when purchased, every car owner should have some form of auxiliary lock put upon his or her car. Car locking devices are many and varied. I believe in form of steering-wheel locking device; this prevents the steering-post from being turned in any direction; should someone start the engine the car could be propelled in but one direction, and also a device that locks the transmission.

The records show that a car equipped with any form of auxiliary lock is seldom stolen, compared with the unprotected car. In other words so many thousands of cars stand about the streets of any great city, equipped with no form of lock save the ignition lock and are "so many" that the thief usually does not take any other car.

To my mind each car should have a title, the same as a piece of ground. A person buying a second-hand car should demand a clear title. There should be plenty of "private marks" on your car to assist in identification if it is stolen and recovered. There should be a greater interstate car when the cars are licensed. Thieves alter cars very quickly. A small touring car stolen at twelve o'clock noon (disassembled) and at two o'clock the same day the wheels are on a commercial body going to the West Indies, while the engine and top are one another chassis bound for the Maine Woods. The theft of automobiles is a serious thing which we should do everything in our power to stop. We can help by always locking the car if left vacant even for a moment.

"HOVIS"—THE BREAD OF HEALTH

Hovis, famous in Great Britain for nearly 40 years as the most nutritious and delicious health bread, is now baked in Wainwright by Mr. T. Billing, who has been asked by numerous Old Country people if it was possible to secure this bread in Canada. This is indeed good news to all—and particularly those who already recall its goodness in the Old Land.

Hovis is the nearest to being a complete food of any known bread. It has a pleasing flavor and possesses exceptional body-building properties. There is no other bread with quite the flavorful quality that is as rich in food value as Hovis.

It is interesting to note that the name Hovis is derived from two Latin words—Hominis (man) and Vis (strength of man). Truly Hovis contains the richest part of grain and contributes to the "strength of man."

Hovis has a flavor entirely its own. The vast numbers using it find it rather bread so appetizing and tempting in flavor. There is indeed a keen enjoyment awaiting those still unfamiliar with Hovis. It builds the body and mine into its native state of health. In food value it is unequalled as produced in the Canadian West is used in the making of Hovis.

What Shall We Give?

BACK through the centuries Christmas has always been a time for the giving of presents—big or little things to delight and gladden the hearts of children and their elders.

But where are the Christmas presents of other years—the toys, the useful things? Broken—worn out—forgotten.

Keep alive the spirit of your gift. Let it bring happiness and contentment from year to year—add a Royal Bank Savings Book to your list of Christmas presents.

Christmas Presentation Covers are provided for Gift Books

for pans and broilers too.

Soak them in Gillex—just a tablespoonful to the dishpan of water. The hard-to-move burnt fat will just fall off. Gillex dissolves the hard grease that holds all this black scale to the metal. Gillex makes hard water rain-soft.

Gillex is the most effective known solvent of oil and grease—has four, to five times the cleaning power of borax or a gritty cleanser.

Gillex will not harm the hands or the most delicate fabrics or surface. Use no more than quantities specified in directions.

THE EXAMINER'S WEEKLY REVIEW OF PROV. MARKETS

CATTLE
REEP—Edmonton reports this week that trading was of a brisk nature and prices held strong. Choice heavy steers brought from $7.07.25; choice light $7.07.50; good $6.50.47; choice $5.75.42; common $4.62.25. Choice heifers $5.75.42; good $5.37.50; choice cows $5.25.50; good $5.12.50; medium $4.25.40; common $3.25.40. Choice calves $9.00.10; common $8.00.10. FEEDERS STOCKERS—Feeder steers brought from $4.50.62; stock steers $4.25.47; stock heifers $3.50.55; stock cows $3.42.25. 1:00S
Edmonton market also shows lower levels and came down to $8.50 for thick smooth and $9.50 for select.

SHEEP
Practically no change noticed on the market at Calgary and Edmonton this week.

GRAIN
The week during the fore part of this snowed and there was a little but now it has cleared up and it looks as if about another couple of weeks should just about clean up the balance of threshing.

BUTTERFAT—BUTTER
BUTTERFAT—The talked of advance in values had not there place at the time of writing and there does not appear to be much likelihood of it becoming effective. Some creameries report increase in receipts but others state they are just about on a par with last week. CREAMERY BUTTER—Make light and market prices unchanged. Sales reported to be holding up well. Coast market quiet under heavy offering of New Zealand butter. East also quiet and said to be down below Alberta price. DAIRY BUTTER—Receipts in this market are limited as bulk of make is being used at home; cream receipts also affecting output. Prices unchanged.

POULTRY—EGGS
POULTRY—Receipts continue light as farmers are busy threshing. Ca. and owl offerings increased slightly latter part of this week for Thanksgiving trade, and jobbers are inclined to anticipate decline after the holiday. Turkey crop reported as being light, with birds late owing to wet summer season. No change in values. EGGS—Receipts from poultrymen and farmers in the province are very light and bulk of demand is being supplied by storage eggs and shipment from the coast. Good trade passing.

HIDES—WOOL
HIDES—Deliveries light while demand is moderate; prices holding steady. WOOL—Deliveries are limited and jobbers quote 17c at country points not anxious to receive supplies.

FURS
Quotations unchanged. Market reported that coyote pelts are priming up nicely and will be in No. 1 condition shortly. Weasel also turing while badger will be ready in about another month.

A PREDICTION LIKELY TO COME TRUE

You who have no chance at flying need not despair, for your day is soon to come. Those war veterans, you must remember, put in a long, grim apprenticeship over Flanders' fields and they had all honorably won the laurels that Uncle Sam's aerial training has brought them. They are the pioneers in peace, of the greatest which will soon be one of the greatest in the world. Flying will progress with them. Five years from now there will be thousands of trained aviators in the field, but these will all have been trained by these selfsame pioneers.

The life of the commercial airman will be a pleasant one. What fellow with any heart for adventure and with red blood in his veins can resist the temptation of speeding through the air? The life is the cleanest and healthiest that could be imagined; just the profession for the man who loves the great outdoors. The duties of the present day automobile chauffeur will be more strenuous than his flying three or four hours every day. No longer will he be rigged out like an arctic explorer, unnecessarily exposed to a cutting head wind and the roar of the engine. He will recline with ease, in an enclosed cabin which is electrically lighted and heated throughout, even to taking a hand at cards with the passengers.

In the near and wonderful future of the airplane, and afternoon spin from New York to Cuba will be a very common occurrence, or South America a week-end flight. The faint-hearted public will look upon airplane accidents with sinking hopes. The reasonable public—and naturally, some quality of courage must enter into all good human reasoning—will recognize that in flying there always will be accidents and in present stage of infancy there will be a greater proportion of accidents than will prove to be the normal. A man who wants a permanent life insurance against death, needs to be an immortal, for on this planet we are only mortals.

A few people will always seek to prolong life by refusing the thrills of living dangerously. They will not go up in the air, or out on the sea in ships nor ride horses nor be carried by automobiles. But thank heaven they are few! The average man is not a death dodger, but trusts his existence to the usual risks of life. It would be miserable to live otherwise.

ARE PARENTS PEOPLE

ARTICLE FIVE
(Published by arrangement with Canadian Social Hygiene Council)

1. Does the present-day parent compare favorably or unfavorably with the parent of past generations?
2. To what extent can parents be blamed for juvenile delinquency? And in what respects?
3. Can a parent by controlling environment and companionship, mould the character of the child as desired?
4. Do you believe in the plan of parent education? If so, what should it include?
5. At what age do you think parent education should start? Should it be before or after marriage?
6. Do you think the inclusion of health as a major topic in a parent education scheme might do much to increase the physical well-being of the country?

BY JUDGE J. F. MCKINLEY
Judge of the Juvenile Court, Ottawa

Yes. Parents have always been negligent. The children of today have a great many more temptations than those of yesterday. This makes the parents' responsibility all the greater—which responsibility they do not, as parents realize.
2. Ninety per cent. of the delinquency which has come before me has been occasioned as a result of the discipline, ignorance or neglect of parents.
3. Absolutely.
4. Everything.
5. Twelve years of age.
6. Yes.

Don't Tell The Wife

Copyright 1926 Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.

by

WILLIAM B. COURTNEY

"DON'T TELL THE WIFE" starring Irene Rich, is a Warner Bros. production of this novel

The pain snapped Joan out of the primitive past, to the perilous present. In her irritation she lost all desire to kiss Abner.

In his scare Abner too also lost all desire to kiss Joan. Farther out of a miasmic fog of passion he CLUNG to her.

The romantic side of Joan had been flattered to think of a lover who could be so oblivious to the possibility of death which stared him in the face, and could think only of seizing the chance however inopportune to press his love. Joan had thought that this augured well for his enthusiasm. But Joan being a woman was romantic.

SECOND—pragmatic first! "Abner!" she shouted sharply "brace up and do something to get us out of this before we're awamped!"

"But I've told you, there's nothing I can do," he whined.

"Come, come!" She broke his hold and wrestled him toward the rowing seat. "You row and I'll bail. Hurry or we'll founder any time."

"I can't row!"

Joan's ire was not abated. "You're a coward!" she cried.

"If Ranny were in this pickle," she yelled, "he'd say, 'Cheer up, lady mine! While there's life there's fight. We'll keep trying! Come dear. Do you want to see me drown?'"

"Blast Ranny! Why can't you leave his name out of this? I don't care what he'd do or say. There's no use in doing or saying anything."

"Are you—quitting?" Joan asked.

"Look, Abner! Montauk Light is growing dimmer. We're drifting out to sea. Do something for God's sake before we go down."

"There's no hoe!" he cried wildly. Pitching forward he took a deathlike hold of her, pinioning her arms so that she was helpless to bail or move.

"Let me go! Oh this is all Ranny's fault. He'll be satisfied now that he's killed me."

Joan was going to pieces. It was in the nature of things that she should, for despite her uncommon physical courage, the psychological strain of Abner's panic had subtly disintegrated her own fibre.

The dory was shuddering bobbing crazily threatening every moment to somersault from the summit of some wave.

A last surge of fighting courage swept over Joan. If she must go down she would go down fighting.

Ranny! Oh if Ranny were only here now—no! Hang Ranny! She never wanted to see him again. It was all his fault. It was his fault. All his fault he'd be—sorry—Desperately she threw off Abner's twining arms sobbing faintly. She crept on her knees through the water in the bottom of the boat and dragged herself into the rowing seat.

Pluckily she worked to lift the heavy oars into the tholes and tried to head the dory into the wind.

The storm raged on the sea. Out of her hands like watchwood, whirled them away, and in the same moment Abner threw himself against her legs clawing her.

As thus they fought—she to continue the fight for life, he to abandon it, a monstrous wave overwhelmed the dory. Two humans spun clear into the boiling sea.

"Ranny Ranny!" Joan's wail rose above the tempest. "It's all—your—fault!"

Then the sea gagged her, while the storm furies howled their ribald mirth.

CHAPTER XIV
All through that wild long night the Speedwell cruised the turbulent waters of the Montauk, and anxious eyes strained to follow every yard of the systematic sweeping of her searchlight.

In vain.

Dawn broke, or rather, the night merged almost imperceptibly into a morning of grayness and steady rain while the gale abated but the seas continued to run high and fast toward the distant strand.

Though no word went down from the bridge yet somehow the news of what had happened permeated through the ship; and everyone of the guests oblivious to the rain and ill-dressed against it huddled along the forward rail—silently staring at each other.

It was a grave tragic group; far different from the lightly gabbling crowd who started out the previous afternoon.

Terrible concerns lent supernatural power a lair from the belt of a vaquero standing at his side and whirling it skillfully over head let it coil through the intervening space, faster than a running horse until it settled around Captain Stoner's body. Immediately he was jerked from the saddle and fell with a surprised thump to the ground.

Working laboriously, Vasquez pulled the body through the archway to his brother's side and stood looking down upon the two men with his emotions torn between love and hatred.

"You have killed a Vasquez!" It was no longer a boy speaking.

Stoner closed his eyes and shuddered at the cold, cruel expression on his brother's face; and a shiver of fear went through him when he noted from under half closed lids that young Vasquez bent over his brother's bleeding ear to Ranny's vision. A cry escaped his lips simultaneously with a grunt from Captain Marty, whose trained eyes had halcyon seen that far blotch upon the water. A shiny dark spot with two bobbing specks beside it.

"It's them!" the Captain shouted after a rapid survey through his binoculars. He was genuinely excited for perhaps the first time in his life. "The dory's capsized. They're clinging to it!"

Thank God! cried Ranny. He too, was unstrung, for the first time in his life. Trembling.

Clay took firm hold of his shoulders and shook his encouragingly; while Silver puffed furiously on a black cigar.

There had been enough excitement on this cruise to satisfy even a humbler king!

Within an incredibly brief time Captain Marty maneuvered the big Speedwell alongside the castaways. Abner, plain to behold was totally tucked.

While seamen let down a rope ladder Ranny went overboard in a shallow dive and took physical control of the situation in the water.

"Joan, Joan are you all right?" he spluttered beseechingly as he came up beside her and swiftly relieved her of the practically dead weight of Abner who was apparently in a semi-conscious condition. "Oh Joan, why did you do this? Why, why?—Oh, I'm so sorry!"

Joan's ghastly greenish white from nausea and fatigue avoided his eyes—ignored him.

When the rope ladder fell within her reach she scorned his helping hand and "dragged herself" stiffly up until the willing hands on the yacht took hold of her. Then she collapsed; fainted dead away, as she was borne off to a cabin and the first aid of anxious women friends.

Ranny shifted Abner's sagging weight to his shoulder and climbed up the rope ladder.

Captain Marty looked Abner over contemptuously. "Nothing much the matter with him, except a scarcity of guts!" he commented harshly. "He'll be all right after a hooker. But if it hadn't been for the woman, the fool would have drowned."

Ranny was rushing down to Joan's cabin when he met Clay emerging.

"Clay caught hold of him! Here now Ranny old son, take it easy! Listen to me—if you've ever had to keep your head, you have to keep it now!"

"Joan, Joan—is she all right? Tell me old man, tell me the truth!"

"Of course she's all right! Done in though. You'd be too Mrs. Telfens and a couple of the women are undressing her, rubbing her. The stewardess has warm blankets ready. There's no danger, and we need all for you down there. So stay up here with me I want to talk to you."

Ranny weak from a grateful flood of relief, suffered himself to be led to an obscure corner of the deck by Clay, unwillingly though.

"I ought to be down there with Joan. That's my place!" he kept repeating.

Clay soothed him lightly. "You won't say so if you heard what she was saying about you? Blaming it all on you. The sight of you would be as welcome to her loving eyes now as a Klan speaker to Tammany Hall. But the point is this: She saved Abner! Get that? She saved Abner!"

"What are you driving at?"

"Simply this, she'd never have had to save YOU. You would have saved her. It's a long long circle, but this brings us back to what I warned you of the day of the game. She either rules or is ruled. There's no give and take in her. Your mistake is that you softened on the dominating stuff and patronizingly tried to compromise.

You gave over being a cave man and tried to be a broad-minded husband. You've taken her into your mental confidence when you should have kept her guessing."

"Well just this. I've got a plan. I have to do all your thinking for you, and I've got to plan. You're going to insist that she takes Abner and you've got to go after a divorce. The place and the time are not propitious to tell you my plan now except that here after instead of letting your wife in all your thoughts—on this plan, particularly—you must be DON'T TELL THE WIFE!"

CHAPTER XV

For the rest of that cruise—and Stiver cut it short under the circumstances by having Captain Marty team back to Glen Cove as speedily as possible—Joan kept to her cabin and avoided her husband.

Abner coming out of his daze of fear and physical weakness, made violent threats to have Ranny jailed—to prosecute all the conspirators in fact including Stiver, and Captain Marty Wales.

Clay Varick, fat and foxy diplomat soothed him out of that.

"I think you'll find a change," he said. "Forbes realizes that his wife no longer loves him but loves you, and would even sacrifice her life for you. I think you will find him—er—tractable."

"I hope so, for it's the only thing that'll keep you all out of jail!" Abner growled in the way a little and thoroughly frightened dog growls at big rough dogs from behind the safety of a high fence.

The yachting party had gone to Biarritz, of course. Nobody could work up much fun in what was a cross between an armed camp and a morgue. A hearty laugh would have sounded as out of place there as at an inquest.

Of course there were furtive snickers and a great deal of sub rosa jabbering in the smoking room, and on the lounge deck. Here was the first decent downright sensation in a jaded Society since Mrs. German eloped with her chauffeur—and this was heaps more thrilling.

But most of the gatherings were by twos or threes. The community spirit was playing possum, until the eagerly awaited future date when all could get together without the restraint of the nearness of the event and the presence of the principals.

Distance and time would lend color to the tale!

The embroidery, in fact, had started already; whispered rumors, when the actors did not appear, of outlandish developments. Rumors, rumors everywhere, but never a stop to think.

These guests noted that there were many wide smiles exchanged among the three, to the accompaniment of much chuckling. Clearly a plot was in hatching—a plan was on the fire.

Mrs. Telfens added the final touch of gnawing misery to the all-consuming curiosity of the week-enders when she eagerly yet furtively, broadcasted the information that she had quite accidentally overheard Ranny warn Stiver:

WHICH WILL BE CONDUCTED
BY THE LOCAL CLERGY. COL MCLEOD OF EDMONTON WILL BE THE PRINCIPAL SPEAKER
THE BAND WILL BE ON HAND TO LEAD THE MUSIC, TOO!

A banquet is being held at the Wainwright hotel on Friday night (Armistice Day) at eight o'clock sharp to which any and every veteran in the district is most heartily invited. There will be a real good time for all, and it is hoped that the gathering will include everyone who has ever served under the colors at any time.

***Check up your storm sash today, and order any you need at the Atlas yard. Phone 37.

Jim Wilson of the park staff is a happy man these days. He is driving his new Chrysler sedan which he procured from the Brunker service station.

The Misses Grace Wells and Vera Stuart were home for the week end to spend the Thanksgiving holiday with their respective parents.

***Winter is here to stay now; so why not enjoy the cold evenings at home with The Star? Renew your subscription, and in addition to getting the paper for a whole year for your

Strop safety razor FREE.

Miss B. Trueman of Edmonton was a guest of Mrs. Arnold Harden over the week end for Thanksgiving.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Gano spent the week end at Unity. Bill was paying a visit to his brother John who formerly farmed in the Falyan district.

***Mr. W. Misener, of Edmonton will be here for his Fall piano-tuning visit about the middle of November. Leave your order at The Star office and Mr.
Misener will call and put your piano in first-class shape for Christmas.

Sunday's miniature blizzard was a reminder that the forty below weather is not far off, and although little snow fell the wind was somewhat unpleasant at times.

Mr. C. Foster of the Bank of Montreal staff spent Sunday with his parents at Loughheed.

***Westinghouse radios and orthosale of British government harness and leather goods which he will put under the hammer on Saturday next.

There is quite a large consignment for this sale.

***Your surplus hens will fetch the best market prices at the Burn creamery. Bring them in to Fred Harrington, manager, any day; shipping right along.

We are sorry to learn that Mrs. Fred Spence is on the sick list these days and wish her speedy recovery.

Mr. W. Mills is here from the coast in the interest of his farm holdings in this neighborhood. Billy says that Wainwright still looks good to him!
Sure!

At the meeting called last Thursday for the purpose of re-organizing the hockey club for this season it was decided that this sports' aggregation will run under the "Elks" colors for the coming winter. We understand that the team is being made up now and a practice is to be called as soon as possible so that all may be ready for a start immediately the ice is made in the rink.

As will be seen from the advertising columns of this issue, the annual meeting of the Wainwright Lions Club is set for Friday, November 25th.
The meeting will open at three o'clock in the afternoon in the C.N. clubrooms. Election of officers for the ensuing year, and the auditor's and director's reports are matters on the agenda, and a full meeting of shareholders is hoped for.

The evangelizing car of the St. George's gospel mission spent a day or so in town last week on its journey across the country.

***The new Ford is to have four wheels, a seat or two, a brake, and—well that's about all we know about that, but we do know that you will make no mistake if you haul your Black Diamond coal home now from the Atlas yard. Phone 37.

Mr. A. C. Ranton, of the Price Development and Refining Co., is in town from Edmonton. A start is to be made at once on a laboratory in the premises rented from the Town Council on Third avenue west.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Stevens left on Monday's train for Turner Valley where Frank has contracted to drill some more oil wells.

will be non-political in character, it is understood.

WAR DECLARED ON SMALL ENVELOPES

OTTAWA — The post office department has declared war on small envelopes and miliary's dainty envel-opette is soon to be a matter of history. Primarily responsible is the new cancellation machine adopted by the postal authorities. In the operation of the cancellation machine if then envelope be small, the cancellation is liable to interfere with the address.
Then again small containers are liable to become lost through dropping out of letter bundles.

Manufacturers have agreed not to turn out any more small envelopes and no small Christmas cards necessitating the use of tiny envelopes will be made
